Nominee “Gender Equality in Politics contest” | 2013

Janice Turner

Jury rapport

Janice Turner is spot-on with her article, “Mirrors are harder to break than glass ceilings.” In her powerful statement she targets the media as a stronghold of gender inequality throughout Europe. Her message, “Women will never smash the glass ceiling until they break the mirror” shows us as the jury that the European media is a dominant and definitive stakeholder of gender inequality in Europe. She explains that besides sufficient rules and regulations, Europe needs a realistic and a positive outlook of women in the media.
